

24 AUGUST
MONDAY

Press Gazette

CONFERENCE
DAY 02

BE HONEST

BDBBPS MUN 2026

BE BRAVE

BD BLUE BELLS PUBLIC SCHOOL

— Building Bridges of Peace and Sustainability —
for Generations to Come

The second day of BDBBPS MUN 2026 brought the conference towards its conclusion, as delegates returned to their committees with positions sharpened and discussions already in motion. What began as opening statements evolved into deeper negotiations, rebuttals and attempts at consensus.

FROM DISCUSSION TO DELIBERATION

As the final sessions unfolded, committees moved beyond establishing positions and towards finding common ground. Delegates questioned, negotiated and defended their perspectives, while the dais guided discussions through the final stages of debate.

Two days of debate ultimately became more than a simulation of diplomacy. They brought together different perspectives, challenged young minds and created moments of collaboration, disagreement and discovery. As the conference closes, its conversations leave behind ideas that extend beyond the committee rooms.

BUILDING BRIDGES OF PEACE AND SUSTAINABILITY FOR GENERATIONS TO COME

THE INK AND THE IRON

BY: MAHI WALIA

Chandni Chowk's labyrinth of iron shutters normally slept in dark, heavy quiet by midnight. Tonight, the air burned with panic.

Under the dim streetlights, a crowd gathered outside the district office. Someone had pasted a stamped government order onto the brick wall. Beside it hung a fresh map of Old Delhi. The lines were completely changed. Decades of political history had been wiped out with one black marker.

Delimitation had sliced the historic core straight down the center. The northern bazaars were forced into a high-rise corporate district. The southern residential lanes were merged with an industrial zone across the river. The constituency of Old Delhi no longer existed.

Sirens echoed in the distance as word spread. In his gated compound, the three-term MP, Mr. Verma, slammed his fists onto his desk. For twenty years, he had controlled every local contract, every police station, and every vote bank. His entire empire rested on borders that no longer existed. Half his loyal voters were suddenly placed in a district where he had no leverage.

Outside his gates, angry party workers burned useless campaign posters. The political machine was bleeding power by the minute.

Two streets away, inside a small, dimly lit office, Shabana watched the chaos unfold. She had spent twelve years working in these alleys, fighting for sanitation workers and women's safety. Every time she demanded a seat at the decision table, party bosses laughed her out of the room. They told her the local math demanded a traditional candidate.

Now, the math was dead. The redrawn map triggered the newly enforced women's reservation quota across the sector. The seat was officially reserved, and the old bosses were trapped in a blind spot.

By sunrise, the main crossing turned into a battleground of words.

Truck drivers and factory workers blocked the main road, demanding higher representation for labor unions. Historic shopkeepers argued that commercial taxes would destroy small businesses if corporate interests took over. Local leaders screamed over megaphones about state rights, demographic manipulation, and stolen votes.

Old Delhi had become a pressure cooker. The entire nation was watching this small patch of land as a preview for what was coming everywhere else.

The old power structure was dead. The maps were rewritten. As the sun hit the red brick walls of the city, the people stood at the edge of a new era, forced to choose who would carry their voice into the unknown.

24 AUGUST
MONDAY

Press Gazette

LOREM IPSUM

CONFERENCE
DAY 02

JUSTICE TO ALL

BY: ARADHYA

Justice for All

A Voice. A Right. A Future.

No woman, no girl, should be left behind,
Justice is not a privilege, it's a right to find.

We dream of a world, both equal and fair,
Where every voice is heard, every heart is cared.

Inclusive and strong, our legal systems stand,
Opening doors of hope across every land.

Discriminatory laws, policies, practices gone,
Breaking every barrier, until all can move on.

From silence to strength, from fear to freedom,
We rise together empowered, respected, and seen.

Justice for women, justice for girls,
Justice for all transforming the world.

1:04

2:45

FEATURED VOICES

Going beyond the proceedings, our feature articles explore the people, perspectives and stories that give the conference its character. Through thoughtful observation and deeper storytelling, these pieces look beyond individual speeches to examine the ideas, experiences and conversations shaping the MUN floor.

24 AUGUST
MONDAY

Press Gazette

LOREM IPSUM

CONFERENCE
DAY 02

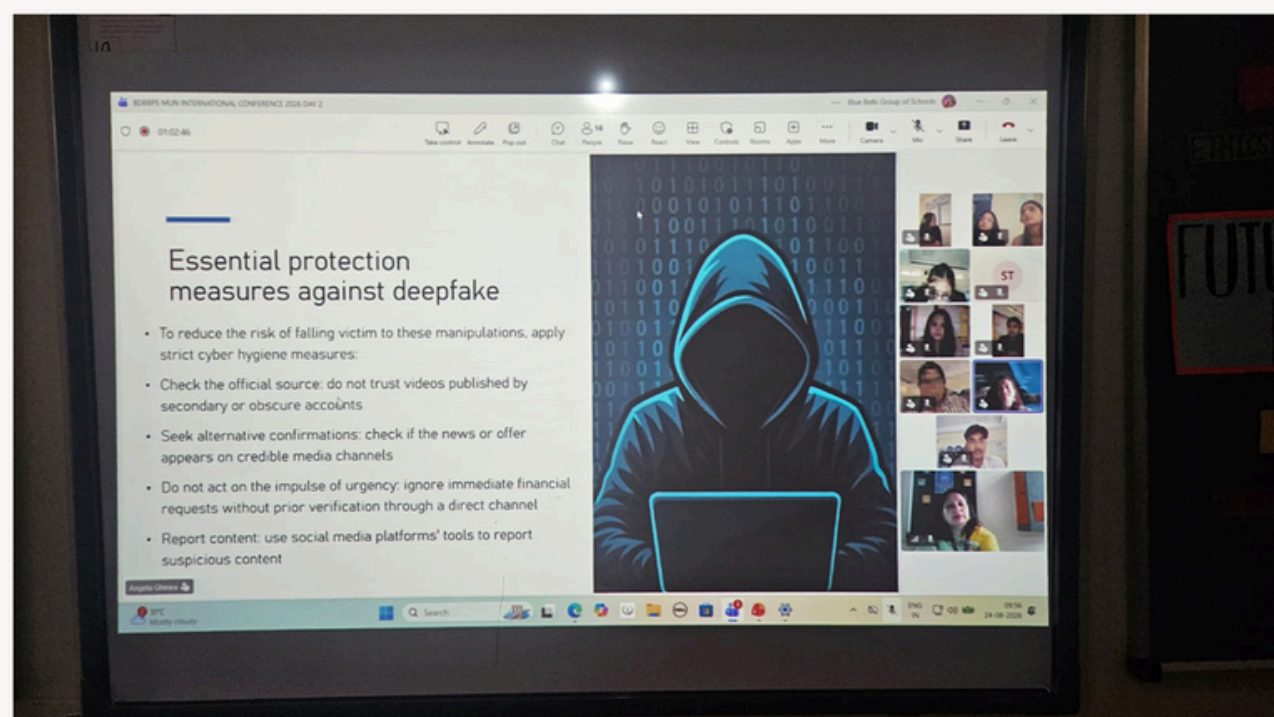

BDBBPS INTERNATIONAL MUN CONFERENCE 2026

Day 2: Ideas, Innovation and a Shared Digital Future

The second day of BDBBPS International MUN Conference 2026 on August 24, 2026, began with an engaging online session connecting students with global partners and educators from Greece, Romania, Zimbabwe, Croatia, Poland and India. The international exchange brought together diverse perspectives united by one common goal: understanding how technology can shape a safer and smarter future.

The session, addressed by Ms. Roopali Kudesia, Principal, BDBBPS, focused on the theme “Cyber Security and the Future of Artificial Intelligence.” Distinguished speakers from Greece, Romania, Croatia and Zimbabwe shared valuable insights, while six students of Grades XI and XII from BDBBPS Sector 10, Gurugram, presented their well-researched perspectives on Cyber Security and AI.

Divided into Presentations, Interaction and Takeaways, the session encouraged meaningful dialogue, innovation and cross-cultural learning. The day concluded with a warm Felicitation Ceremony, celebrating the participation of students and guest speakers from across the globe.

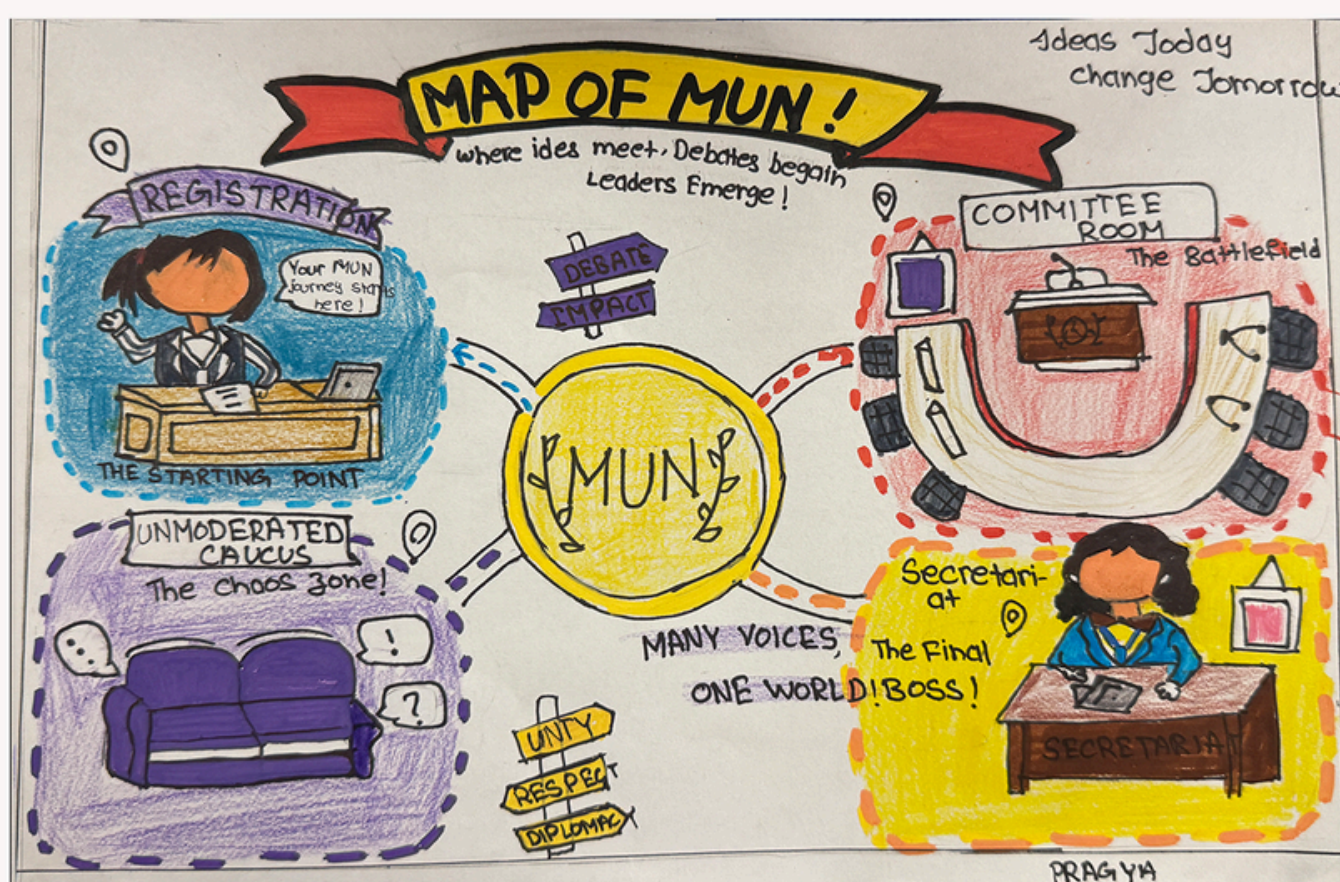

24 AUGUST
MONDAY

Press Gazette

LOREM IPSUM

CONFERENCE
DAY 02

SKETCHES FROM THE FLOOR

24 AUGUST
MONDAY

Press Gazette

LOREM IPSUM

CONFERENCE
DAY 02

THE DAY IN FRAMES

BDBBPS MUN 2026

INTERNATIONAL PRESS CORPS